- Detour options: Stations up to 25 miles off the freeway for the stretches where I-5 itself has no Costco diesel at all.
- Working links: Tap-friendly links on every station (Google Maps navigation + Costco warehouse page) when you read the PDF on a phone, plus phone numbers for print.

Why this planner exists

Only 71 of 689 Costco fuel stations sell diesel — and the West Coast's busiest road-trip route crosses a 370-mile stretch and a 244-mile stretch with none. This PDF turns the full live costcodiesel.com dataset into a windshield-ready fuel plan for I-5.

How to use this planner

- Order: Stations are listed south to north. Find your leg of the trip, note the next-diesel column, and fill before the big gaps.
- Digital: On a phone, every station name links to its Costco warehouse page and every “Map” link opens Google Maps navigation to that exact pump entrance.
- “Off I-5”: Distances are straight-line miles from the I-5 centerline to the station — add 15-25% for the actual drive off the freeway.
- Gap column: “Next diesel” is corridor mileage to the NEXT main-list station — if your tank can't make it, use the detour table or fill earlier.

The two gaps that matter

1) Los Angeles → Elk Grove (Sacramento area): the Grapevine and the whole west-side Central Valley have ZERO Costco diesel on I-5. Fill in the LA area before Tejon Pass, or take the ~14-mile Bakersfield detour at the CA-99 junction.
2) Central Point (Medford) → Portland: no Costco diesel anywhere on I-5 between them. Medford or Portland — plan ~260 miles.

Before you go (60-second checklist)

- Costco fuel is members-only — bring your card (diesel lanes often share the gas queue).
- Diesel hours can differ from gas hours — the phone number on each station is the fastest check.
- Big rigs and long RVs: not every Costco fuel lane fits a 40-ft rig; the Medford, Redding and Lacey locations are commonly used by truckers.
- Prices change daily — check the live map at costcodiesel.com for station status before long legs.

About this data

Stations are drawn from the same live dataset that powers costcodiesel.com — refreshed weekly from Costco's public warehouse API (last updated 2026-11-02). Diesel availability and hours can change; call ahead on long legs. This planner lists stations and mileage only — it does not track prices.

CostcoDiesel.com is an independent site and is not affiliated with Costco Wholesale. This planner is free; share the download link, not the file, so everyone gets the latest edition.

More editions coming: I-10 (LA → Florida) and I-95 (East Coast).
